

Research Proposal

Title:

“Spotlighting on Orphan Children in India”

Key Words:

Orphans, Parentless, Orphanage, Abuse, Psychological problems, India.

Introduction:

India having 1.35 billion people in it, considered as having the second largest population in the world. Focusing on children, nearly 30 million children are orphans. The orphans are in Orphanages for some reasons particularly, they are abandoned or have run away from their home in order to escape from their horrible situations.

Literature Review:

Indian Writing in English is the works of writers in India who write in English language. Actually, English Literature is a term for all literature that has been produced throughout history. Generally novel is an invented prose of significant length which deals with human experience. For this study the researcher intended to study select novels of Indian novelists in English.

Use of doing research in literature is finding information related to an aspect of a piece of literature and to get better understanding of the lives of other individuals, communities and cultures. The research aims to study Orphan children in Indian orphanages. The orphans in orphanages are still with some needs including stable shelter, family environment, adequate food, clothing and medical care. Even some orphans are sexually harassed, beaten and psychologically abused. And above all, they are susceptible to psychological problems like anger, depression, anxiety and feelings of sadness.

Research Design:

The purpose of this study is to investigate the problems faced by orphan child in Indian orphanages. The research design aims to focus on qualitative research approaches with observational study.

Conclusion:

There are so many researches on orphans about the problems faced by orphans in orphanages. But this study aims to focus mainly on the problems faced by orphans in non-governmental orphanages in India.